Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully f you want to keep your hair look ing its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greasless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which ringes out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky. bright, lustrous, fluffy and casy to manage,

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advt.

Armour's Part in Keeping Down Food Costs

700 occupy the place that Armour does in relation to the country's food supply imposes responsibilities of stupendous importance. And in this time of high food costs, higher than any of us have ever known them, it is only fair to the American people, that they should know how fully Armour realizes these responsibilities—how thoroughly the Armour organization lives up to its stewardship.

It must be remembered that Armour is not a producer, but a purchaser of raw materials; not a retailer, but a manufacturer of finished food products.

In this position, as a great public servant, it is Armour's highest aim to provide the farmer with a steady and continuous market, that he may be stimulated to greater production.

As increased yield brings greater revenue to the stock grower, so does it bring greater volume. But, most important, greater supply likewise means lower prices to consumer.

Yet encouraging greater production is but one way in which Armour strives to keep prices at true-value levels. In scientific handling, Armour effects wholesale economies which further hold down living costs.

And this is accomplished by turning all inedible portions into valuable marketable byproducts. Under less economical systems, these parts would be charged to you in higher prices for meats.

But even such efficiency in preparation is not enough. Your food supply must be distributed cheaply, and without undue shrinkage or spoilage. So Armour has built a line of refrigerator cars. And because Armour and Company own and maintain these refrigerator cars, no outside car shortage can ever stop the delivery, nor raise the price of meats, your most energizing food.

These factors act as a wholesome influence generally in keeping prices at true-value

Once this is borne upon you, it follows as a matter of course that in specifying Armour foods upon your table, you are working for your own best interests.
